India Flood Toll Near 900; 4 Cities Still Threatened

NEW DELHI, Sept. 7 (UPI) - Monsoon floods in northern and eastern India have killed at least 898 persons and damaged crops worth $1 i4 million, officials said today.

They said that a vast area is still under water and the death toll is expected to go beyond 1,000. The officials said the floods have also drowned about 3,900 head of cattle.

The flooding of New Delhi by the Yamuna River is about over, but the Yamuna and the Ganges are threatening four large Indian cities, the officials said.

Although the level of the Yamuna, which crested 15 feet above flood stage at New Delhi, has dropped by more than a foot there, its waters threatened Agra, 140 miles to the south, home of the Taj Mahal.

Officials said the Taj Mahal itself was safe, however, because it sits on high ground.

The Yamuna and the Ganges, considered holy by millions of Hindus, have flooded hundreds of miles of cropland, destroyed thousands of homes and swept through major cities and towns for nearly 500 miles. More than 400,000 persons were homeless in the New Delhi

All India Radio reported today that the Ganges breached the 16thcentury embankment at Allahabad, 350 miles southeast of New Delhi, and flooded several sections of the city.

"The situation on the bank of the Ganges is serious and grave," the broadcast said. It said much of the city of Banares was flooded. Further south, the Ganges also threatened Patna, capital of Bihar state. A 300-mile stretch of land along the Ganges from Allahabad to Bhagalpur in Bihar Ganges was flooded, officials said, and thousands of acres of farmland were under 4 to 5 feet of water.

"The damage is colossal," said an Irrigation Ministry official. Army troops, police and rescue workers moved nearly 300,000 Delhi area residents to higher ground. The majority were being housed in tenements and school buildings.

The government denied a report that a 10-mile-long embankment rotecting Shahdra, a suburb of 1 million people across the Yamuna from New Delhi, had been breached.

By R.W. Apple Jr.
LONDON, Sept. 7 (NYT) — Prime Minister James Callaghan sprang one of the biggest political surprises of the postwar era on the British public tonight by announc-ing that there would not be a general election in the near future.

In a brief television speech, the prime minister said that the present Labor government would carry on because we are doing what is best for Britain." He conceded that without a majority in the House of Commons, and without the guaranteed support of the Liberal Party, he would be "more vulnerable to defeats" in Parliament. But he argued vigorously that an election this fall would solve nothing.

"Let's see it through together." Mr. Callaghan told the nation in a dramatic live broadcast from his office at 10 Downing Street.

British governments hold office for a maximum of five years, so the prime minister can, if he wishes, put the election off until Oct. 10, 1979. But it had been predicted by almost every politician and almost every commentator that he would go to the country on either Sept. 28 or Oct. 5 this year, in the hope of capitalizing on improvement in the British economy.

Advertising Campaigns

Every national newspaper had predicted or flatly stated that an election was imminent. One of the senior members of the Cabinet told friends last week that the decision was "not quite set in concrete, but almost." All three parties had already begun advertising campaigns and had assembled campaign organizations.

The leaders of the opposition parties expressed astonishment and people," she added, accusing Mr. Callaghan of timidity at a time when "he has lost his majority and with it the authority to govern.

David Steel, the Liberal Party leader, called the announcement "truly astounding." He said that the country would be disappointed by what he described as a decision "to stagger through a difficult winter with no majority." And he added menacingly, "The sooner the government goes to the country the better. We shall act accordingly."

Scottish Nationalists

His comment implied that the Liberals would oppose the government on the first vote of confidence in the new parliamentary session this fall, in which the House of Commons will be asked to approve Mr. Callaghan's program as embodied in the queen's speech.

But the government can survive without Liberal support. The prime

Former Texas Gov. John Connally and his wife Nellie testifying at House Select Committee on Assassinations Wednesday.

Connallys Describe 'Silent, Terrible Ride' of Dallas

By George Lardner Jr.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7 (WP) - "There was no screaming in that horrible car." Nellie Connally recalled emphatically of the moments after the shotwere fired. "It was just a silent, terrible ride. Our husbands were dying in our arms."

Quietly but vividly, as though it had just happened, former Texas Gov. John Connally and his wife appeared yesterday before the House Select Commitlee on Assassinations to recount the murder of President John F. Kennedy in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963.

It was the first time that the Connallys, who had been riding with President and Mrs. Kennedy that day in the latal motorcade, had testified publicly under oath. The Warren Commission, whose penchant for secrecy helped give rise to the current inquiry, heard from them only in executive session, spending less than an hour with the governor and only five minutes with his wife.

For nearly three hours yesterday, they relived every moment, differing on some points, slightly revising others that assassination critics undoubtedly will seize upon and dispute for years to come.

Mr. Connally said that he was sure his testimony would fail to stop the speculation and dispel the ru-mors about the official conclusion that the assassination was the work of Lee Harvey Oswald, acting

The Connallys confined themselves to what they eard and saw. She remembered three shots. Wounded by one of them, the former governor heard only two. Both agreed they all came from above and behind them, from the direction of the Texas School Book Depository where Oswald had worked. "We may be wrong" about the precise sequence or timing of the shots. Mr. Connally said at one point.

but he rejected suggestions that his or Mrs. Connally's memories might have dimmed with the years.

"The things we do remember today," he said solemply, "are as indelibly eached in our minds as anything ever could be."

The crucial questioning concerned the number of shots that were fired and where they landed. The Warren Commission concluded that there were three, one of which missed the presidential limousine, one of which wounded both Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Connally, and one which finally killed the president.

Despite that conclusion. Nellie Connally and, until yesterday her husband, had always insisted without reservation that Mr. Connally and Mr. Kennedy were wounded by separate bullets, before the fatal shot was fired. Indirectly at least, that version conflicts with the Warren Commission's findings because it fails to explain the bullet that missed, the one that hit a curbstone several hundred feet in front of the presidential car and kicked up a concrete fragment, nicking a bystander in the cheek. The Warren Commission con-cluded that Oswald could have fired three shots but no more. A fourth shot would suggest the presence of a second gunman. Undeterred by such arithmetic, Mr. Connally told

Life magazine in 1966 that he was positive that he and the president were hit by separate shots.

Yesterday, however, Mr. Connally made a major concession, declaring now that it "might well be" that the single-bullet theory was correct after all and that he and Mr. Kennedy were wounded by the same shot, passing through both the president and Mr. Connally before it lodged in the governor's left thigh.

Mrs. Connally had no such reservations. The first shot, she said, hit Mr. Kennedy, a second bullet hit her husband, and the third killed the president.

"I heard a noise that I didn't think of as a gunshot." she told the committee under questioning by Gary Cornwell, the deputy chief counsel. Sitting in a jumpseat next to her husband and in front of the Ken-nedys, Mrs. Connally "looked in back and saw the president clutch his hands to his neck," she explained. He said nothing. He just slumped down in the seat."

"John had turned to his right and shouted, 'no, no, ' Nellie Connally said. Then, "the second shot was fired and hit him. He [Mr. Connally] was in the process of turning [back around again, this time to his left]. His hand was on his knee. The bullet went through him.

'Never Looked Back'

Mrs. Connally said she thought her husband was dead but instinctively pulled him down into her lap. "The only thing I could think of was to pull him down, so maybe they wouldn't hurt him anymore." she testified, as her husband listened, brushing tears from his eyes with a handkerchief. "I never looked back [at the Kennedys] after John was hit."

Both, however, heard the final shot, the one that

"It had a very pronounced impact." Mr. Connails said, stamming his hands together with a loud thwack. "I could see blood and brain tissue all over the car. We were covered. There were little pieces of brain tissue as big as your little finger."

At that, Nellie Connally remembered, Jacqueline Kennedy cried out, "They've killed my husband. I have his brains in my hand." Mr. Connally said he is convinced that the first shot he heard did not hit him, but he does not know whether it hit the president either, as his wife said it

"I heard what I thought was a ritle shot," he said of the first report, "I turned [to the right] to see if I could catch the president out of the right corner of my eye. I frankly had a fear of assassination."

Born in Brest Litovsk, Russia, he immigrated with his family to New York in 1910. He grew up on the lower East Side, where his father sold cheap clothing from a stand in Grand Street. He came home in 1923 with little money but an elegant Continental wardrobe. He dabbled in writing and in acting, then drifted into freelance press agentry for nightclubs and theaters. In 1924, he married a Henry Street Settlement worker, Hilda Caplan. Their honeymoon, he said, was a 50-cent Chinese lunch, after which both returned to work.

Mr. Sonnenberg entered the big time with an engagement to publi-cize the new Fifth Avenue Hotel in 1926. He and his clients, who soon included other major hotels, found that the key to prominent play in the press was to promote the presence of newsworthy guests, paying or otherwise.

A great early coup was his mounting of a sort of parade up Broadway for Trader Horn, an African peddler whose ghostwritten memoirs became a best seller.

Ely Culbertson was another early client. Mr. Sonnenberg asserted that he had "sold" contract bridge as newsworthy to an editor of The New York Times, who first objected that "we play poker here" but who finally arranged for a tele-graph line to the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel to report on a Culbertson

But the man's eventual fate, like that of most others in the mounting influx of Asian and Arab refugees seeking asylum in this city, which is still officially occupied by the four Allied powers of World War II, may be less fortunate. So far, the deportations and pressure on the Pakistani authorities have not stemmed the flow of immigrants lured by the hope - usually illusory - of finding work and making money.

In the first eight months of the year, close to 10,000 new immigrants arrived in the outpost city, more than during all of last year. The majority were Pakistanis, more than 5,600 so far, with other large groups coming from India and the Arab countries.

The growing influx, which poses serious problems for the local authorities, has made West Berlin the German center of illegal immigration, with figures twice as high as in the rest of West Germany. The foreigners have little trouble getting here, through neighboring East Germany, since West Berlin,

S. Africa Bans Black Leader Nthato Motlana

JOHANNESBURG, Sept. 7 (UPI) — The South African government announced a monthlong ban yesterday on Dr. Nthato Motlana, thus preventing one of the country's leading black spokesmen from personally delivering a fiery speech on the failures of South Africa's educational system.

The banning order, signed by Police Minister Jimmy Kruger, was delivered only hours before the he said through an interpreter, "but BERLIN, Sept. 7 (NYT) — For three days recently, Abdul Latif Malik, an illegal immigrant from trois. Travelers from the East can Pakistan, sat without food in a enter the Allied sectors by subway West Berlin refugee home, almost or elevated railway, just getting off at one of the 200 or more stops in the Western half of the city.

To dissuade the immigration, authorities have begun to look sharply into the operations of what they say is an illicit network of helpmates, including German lawyers and Pakistani travel agents, who are out to make money from the misery of the poor.

One lawyer, who asked not to be identified, said that he made out 20 or more asylum applications for immigrants daily and earned about $50 from each of the foreigners. "If a man tells me his is a political ref-ugee, I don't ask questions," he said. Authorities have started proceedings against him and nine other West Berlin lawyers reported to have handled the bulk of the Pakistani cases.

Under West German law, foreigners seeking permanent resi-dence in West Berlin or West Germany must prove that they are vic-tims of political prosecution at home and must formally apply for asylum. Accordingly, the new-comers, most of them illiterate and few with any knowledge of a Western language, are rushed by travel operators immediately upon arrival to a lawyer's office where the necessary papers are made out.

Outlawed Party

In the case of the Pakistanis the applications generally say that the immigrants were members of the Pakistani People's Party, a group officially outlawed. With that paper in hand, the immigrants register with the police authorities to ask for asylum and qualify for support and shelter while their cases are being studied, a process that can take years. (Since early this week, officials have ruled that simple membership in the Pakistani party or any other political group does not qualify foreigners for asylum.)

Once they are accepted as seeking asylum, the newcomers are given free shelter and receive a daily $3.50 meal payment. For some of the impoverished men, even that small sum seems a lot.

Abdul Latif Malik, at 46, is years older than most of the immigrant Pakistanis, who are generally single men in their early 20s. He said he was brought to Berlin by a travel agent in Pakistan who persuaded him to sell some of his belongings for travel fees and the fare with the prospect of finding a good job in West Germany.

Policy Strains Mar Soviet Harvest Cheer

مكتامن الاجل

MOSCOW, Sept. 7 — The great harvest of 1978 is dominating the headlines and the autumn heroes of the fields are being hailed, but un-derneath the public rejoicing Soviet agriculture seems to be in a nur-

The government newspaper Izvestia has charted progress of the harvest — now two-thirds complete on its front page daily since mid-July. The party's youth newspaper, Komsomolskaya Pravda, reported in its regular "Harvest 1978" column that an amateur, all-female or-chestra was entertaining workers in the fields around Dnepropetrovsk in the Ukraine

The big threshers are working into the night near Moscow. People like Dmitri Agaltsev, a combine operator who personally harvested nearly 1,900 tons of corn in one 17hour day, are being cited as this fall's heroes.

Western agricultural experts agree that the Kremlin has good reason to be pleased with the harvest. It is likely to meet the target of 220 million tons of grain for the year and might even break the 1976 record of nearly 224 million tons.

And yet, while it might seem like smooth sailing. Soviet agriculture has actually been knocked sharply off balance in recent weeks.

First came an unusual plenum of the Communist Party's Central Committee at which President Leonid Brezhnev delivered a scathing attack on agricultural failings.
Within days of that meeting — the first devoted solely to agricul-ture since 1965 — it was announced that Pyodor Kulakov, youngest member of the ruling Politburo and the man directly responsible for agriculture, had died.

Kremlinologists are still scratch-ing their heads over the political implications of the situation. "Agriculture is much more important to the Soviet leadership picture than most of us give it credit for," one commented. They agree that there seem to be serious differences at the top over the proper future course of agricultural policy, and that these differences are being forced into the fore-ground by widespread public dis-satisfaction with the continuing inability of Soviet agriculture to provide enough of the kinds of food it wants.

"It's necessary for the party to try to show they're doing whatever is possible to improve the situa-tion," a Western expert said. The plenum, convened in early June while Western attention was focused on major dissident trials here, was the Kremlin's attempt to do just that Soviet agriculture has made some for agricultural products exceeding impressive gains since the present leadership took over from the ousted Nikita Khrushchev 14 years ago next month. Mr. Brezhnev and his Politburo colleagues have funneled 300 billion rubles ($445 billion) into the land and equipment with which to farm it. Agriculture's share of the total Soviet capital-investment budget had already climbed from 20 percent to 27 per-cent during Mr. Khrushchev's last years in power. The current leadership has done much to close the gap between standards of living on the farm and in the city, by raising farm incomes much faster than factory salaries. Soviet agriculture is said to be the most heavily subsidized in the world, with government payments the output of farming and animal husbandry, the plans for the first two years of the five-year plan were underfulfilled for total gross output and for certain types of products." Mr. Brezhnev conceded in a plenum speech that was reprinted in the Soviet press the next day. "Each year we allocate more and more capital investments and material resources to the development of agriculture. But it must be said that some places these investments do not provide the proper return in the form of output." Mr. Brezhnev's emphasis on capital investment in agriculture during his speech may indicate one of the questions dividing the leader-ship, analysts believe. It "reveals a sensitivity about the diversion of resources from other sectors of the economy for this purpose," an observer commented. The Soviet president lashed out at both the Ministry of Agriculture and the state planning committee. Gosplan, for deliberately obstructing progress toward interfarm cooperation. "This would seem to be the harshest attack on leading officials of Gosplan and the minis-tries since the days of Stalin," an observer said. The plenum took the unusua step of setting specific agricultural production-targets for the 11th five-year plan, which does not even begin until 1981. The targets are extraordinarily detailed, down to the number of self-propelled potato harvesting combines to be delivered during the 1981-1985 period, "Nor-mally, Gospian would have drafted a plan first," a Western agricultural expert noted. "But there's no indi-cation that happened this time."

War by Other Means

When Clausewitz described war as the pursuit of policy goals "by other means," he gave a substantial warning to diplomats. What they do over the green table could be extended into the green fields; the words they drop to one another could be imitated by men, women and children, falling dead before shot and shell. But there is another aspect of the Clausewitz doctrine that is worth bearing in mind, especially at a time when peace is the watchword and very few are willing to talk of war.

Whether at Camp David or in Arab capitals, whether in Moscow or Washington, the main goal may well be peace. But there are other objectives for which the protagonists are willing to risk war. They are pursuing objectives by peaceful techniques - but they are still pursuing those objectives. And this, to play on Clausewitz's words, might well be called war by other means.

Israel hopes to hold some territory that the Egyptians want — and there are other Arabs who want even more and who are unhappy to see President Sadat in the Maryland hills. Moscow and Washington are quarreling, in subdued voices, about Soviet and American citizens arrested in the Soviet Union and the United States. China and Vietnam are arguing, more loudly, about borders and the treatment of the Chinese in Vietnam, about the relations between Cambodia and Vietnam (into which North Korea seems to be projecting itself on Cambodia's side), about the position of the Soviet Union in Asia. Lebanon is still torn by a complex of issues based on the original Christian-Moslem division; sub-Saharan Africa by internal politics and the position of whites in countries where this problem has not yet been resolved. Guatemala is revealing in strikes and acts of violence the limits of political discussion under the Somoza family. Religious disputes in Iran have become highly political. All of these tangled situations comprise goals that could be worked out, presumably, by rational human beings seeking just and equitable answers to their problems. But when goals become fixed in human minds, negotiation becomes tough-minded. Parties seek allies who can apply pressures on their opponents. Tactics of discussion involve flank attacks, central assaults, last stands. War is not only just around the corner from any major negotiation between states or groups that confront one another — it actually enters into the process, in terminology, psychology and frequently in actual, if limited, uses of violence.

This is what none of the parties concerned with the world's present tensions can afford to forget — their approach to the situation may transcend its inherent dangers, or summon up those perils on every occasion. Negotiation that too closely resembles war can leave the bitterness of war in its wake and threaten the stability of any agreement.

And, of course, such tactics around the bargaining table can produce exactly what the negotiations were supposed to avert: war.

During the latter part of the 19th century in Europe there were many meetings of the continental powers, about the Balkans, about the colonies. The voices were diplomatic, but stern; sometimes a Kaiser might write a letter that was stern but undiplomatic. And the principal states sought allies — the Triple Alliance, the Triple Entente — which might, on the surface, only involve the exchange of glossily uniformed marshals and generals. But when the chips were down, when an apparently irrelevant murder by a group of terrorists started Austria-Hungary demanding more than it would have done in a normal diplomatic gathering, the alliances suddenly became real armies, crossing real frontiers, and inflicting death and destruction upon the

So it is well for the participants at Camp David to pray for peace - and for the world to pray for it wherever it is threatened. But peace demands sacrifices; it cannot be achieved by everyone's assertion of presumed rights when these conflict with the demands of others. # Questions About 3 Big Stories

'We're Getting Into Autumn — How

Long Will He Be This Sluggish?'

By William Safire

WASHINGTON — With the W world's eyes fixed on the Ca-toctin Mountain summit, questions go unasked about three of the biggest stories of the year: • The escalation of the Co nist drive to take over Africa. A possibility exists that a sur-face-to-air missile brought down a Rhodesian airliner. If that is true. who armed the terrorists headed by Joshua Nkomo with missiles?

When the Russians tried to arm Cuba with missiles capable of hitting the United States, the U.S. government readily went to the brink of war. If it should turn out that the Russians are supplying missiles to terrorists in Africa (and that is not yet proven), should we not at least stop trying to undermine the "internal settlement?" What would we do if Palestinian terrorists were supplied with missiles? Or Puerto Rican nationalists?

• The biggest money-stealing scandal in the history of the American government.

On July 26, after being shown evidence of widespread corruption, Jimmy Carter authorized the Justice Department to enter the investigation of the General Services Administration. On July 27, he authorized the firing of Robert T. Griffin, a Tip O'Neill crony who had been with the agency for 35 years and had been its acting head during the 76-77 interregnum.

At the time, we were told that the Griffin dismissal was just a matter of bureaucratic incompatibility: Tip's man just couldn't get along with the new agency chief. But why should the president risk a major blowup with his much-needed House speaker over a simple patronage matter?

Real Reason?

What was the real reason for forcing Tip's man out? We have been assured that Mr. Griffin is a man of "high moral character and personal integrity;" if so, why was he not left in place to help ferret out the grafters in the agency he knew better than anybody?

If, on the other hand, Mr. Griffin was seen to be personally honest but likely to protect his old pals, or to drag a foot if the investigation reached congressmen who may have cut a few deals, then why was Tip's crony given a $50,000 sine-cure in the Carter White House? That's quite a place to put somebody you do not trust.

• The theft of vital national security information about the super-se-cret U.S. "Big Bird" satellite.

The United States has a dozen photographic reconnaissance satel-lites sensitive enough to read the license plates on the cars of Kremlin officials. This "Big Bird" is the best source of intelligence available to verify Soviet SALT compliance. Three weeks ago, a 23-year-old clerk named William Kampiles, who had worked for the CIA eight months last year, was arrested for stealing the manual of this ultra-secret satellite and selling it to the Soviet Union

Inquiring senators have been told that only three numbered copies of this document were at CIA headquarters. Stansfield Turner's ashen-faced aides have been furnbling for answers to questions like

How was it possible for a new, young clerk to be in possession of the most sensitive information the United States possesses?

Incredible Laxity

What kind of security system information does the CIA have that permits a clerk to take home a document too large to fold? And what incredible laxity permits one of three copies of the nation's closestheld manual to be missing for 10 months with nobody noticing?

What kind of intelligence show is Adm. Turner running that picks up signs that the Russians were making significant changes in counter-ing the "Big Bird" — without set-ting off alarms throughout the

A profoundly experienced intelli-gence operative tells me that this may be "the most dangerous penetration of our intelligence since the Soviets put a man in the National Security Agency in the late '50s."

This concern goes deeper than the loss of one great secret and be-yond the need to tighten security procedures. It rejects the notion that any young man can get himself hired by the CIA, be given immediate access to the most intimate secrets of a nation's arsenal, and be able to walk out one sunny day with the single secret that the Russians want most.

The concern of intelligence professionals is that this episode may indicate the presence of a Soviet "agent in place" high up in the CIA. The possibility of an American Philby always draws great chuckles from U.S. leaders; but put on the eyeglasses of the legendary Edward Jay Epstein or novelist Graham Greene and ask along with me:

Who at CIA recruited this young man? Who would know to what place to direct him, or his cut-out. for the manual? Who knew of previous Soviet espionage probes aimed at this kind of reconnaissance information? Was this defec-tor "burned" — deliberately turned in — to protect the agent in place?

The CIA might try to brush off these questions as fanciful, contending instead that the recent theft was the work of one man trying to make some money — but more than one senator of the Select Intelligence Committee is working on the assumption that our intelligence agency has been infiltrated.

Does Tail Wag Dog On Human Rights?

By Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

WASHINGTON — A thrice-reto indicate that there is a genuine peated but unsubstantiated trend toward human rights." peated but unsubstantiated indictment of Argentina by Assistant Secretary of State Patricia Derian testifying publicly before Congress reveals the shattering impact on U.S. foreign policy of human

Under questioning Aug. 9 by the House inter-American affairs subcommittee, human rights chief Derian responded with language seldom used by one friendly power to another, accusing the Argentine re-gime of killings, kidnappings and torture. So harsh was her language that the State Department tried to expunge it from the record. But apart from being undiplomatic, there is considerable doubt of accu-

The impact could prove tragic for U.S.-Argentine relations and perhaps for Argentina itself. Mod-erate and pro-U.S. elements within the Argentine junta have been weakened; deterioration of the U.S. position in the strategic southern corner of South America has been

Prediction

This cannot be dismissed as merely unfortunate ardor by an idealist unfamiliar with diplomacy. Deterioration of U.S. relations with Brazil, Chile and now Argentina too closely follows the scenario of Latin American specialists in the Carter administration who privately predicted that the human rights rusade would foster the left in the Western bemisphere.

Concern that the human rights tail is wagging the foreign policy dog is spreading in both the admin-istration and Congress. On Capitol Hill growing attention is paid to the imminent loss of up to $1.4 billion in sales to Argentina — including $620 million in Export-Import Bank transactions.

So, when Miss Detian testified on Aug. 9, she was asked by sub-committee chairman Gus Yatron of Pennsylvania why her human rights office recommended against the Export-Import Bank loans. Even Miss Derian's own aides were taken aback by her answer:

The reason for our advice was the continuing violation of basic human rights by Argentina. The systematic use of torture, summary execution of political dissidents. the disappearance and the imprisonment of thousands of individuals without charge, including mothers, churchmen, nuns, labor leaders, journalists, professors and members of human rights organiza-

Moments later, Miss Derian repeated her indictment, adding "kidnappings" and "unwarranted

Horrified officials in the State Department's Inter-American Bureau crossed out Miss Derian's indictment in the transcript, but it was too late. Word had gone to Argentina, where Patt Derian has become a household word. The U.S. ambassador in Buenos Aires was called in for a stiff protest; the Argentine ambassador in Washington was called home.

The tragedy is that Miss Derian's outburst may well weaken the junta's relatively moderate elements, headed by the president, Gen. Jorge Rafael Videla, and strengthen the extreme right. While President Carter's human rights admonitions probably have improved conditions in Argentina, the point of diminishing returns has been

Apart from undiplomatic ravages, was Miss Derian telling the truth? Her office insists that the Argentine junta has "executed" 3,000 persons since seizing power in 1976 and that additionally at least 5,000 persons are missing. But these figures come from private sources of dubious reliability. U.S. government bureaus with vastly more experience than Miss Derian's say the figures cannot be verified and seem inflated.

Actually, the junta, in confronting a bloody rebellion by the far left in 1976, used an iron fist to prevent a Communist takeover. But many killings and kidoappings are traceable to rightist paramilitary. groups not under government control and should not be counted as government "executions." More-over, objective observers agree that Argentina's human rights record has improved markedly the past

Nuances Disregarded

Those nuances are disregarded by Miss Derian's office. While un-able to draw distinctions between moderates and extremists inside the junta, the human rights crusaders say that military rule in Argentina cannot last much longer and that the United States should disengage from backing the junta. Such a prospect is rejected by Latin American experts, whatever their ideolo-

But behind the naivete, a pattern emerges. A prediction was made before Mr. Carter took office by Brady Tyson, now with the U.S. mission to the United Nations, that human rights would be used to sup-port revolutionary forces in the hemisphere. An identical prediction was made privately last year by Robert Pastor of the National killings." In her soft Mississippi accent, she read the litany a third time, concluding: "We see nothing help fulfill those prophecies.

And we learn, of course, that jokes that are funny in some cultures are utterly mystifying in others. A generation ago, after 15 years of Hitler and a world war, a random sample of Germans was shown Charles Addams classical cartoon depicting a skier whose tracks showed him somehow to have slipped past a tree with one ski on either side of the trunk. The Germans diligently proffered na-turalistic explanations about how such a thing might be contrived by trick movements of one sort or another.

Thus literally would Russians receive many American jokes, and vice versa. But. . . there is a true, as distinguished from a synthetic, detente in respect of humor that is at once highly topical and yet tran-

The generic Soviet joke, which probably was invented a week after Lenin took power, is: "What is the difference between capitalism and socialism?" To which the answer is "capitalism is the exploitation of man by man, and socialism is the opposite." Prof. Stephen Cohen gave as the next most standard joke, "Is it possible to build socialism in one country, say, Holland?"
"Of course, but what have you got against Holland?" On my first trip to the Soviet Union I was most solemnly warned at a State Department briefing that jokes at the expense of Lenin were not under any circumstances to be attempted: that in Soviet circles such jokes would be the equivalent of jokes about God at a Baptist convention. That year was more-over the 100th anniversary of the birth of Lenin, and the celebration of that monster's brief but decisive leverage on world history was at the saturation level — after reaching the figure 100, I gave up counting publications featuring the face of Lenin at a single large newsstand in Moscow. In Poland there was a book of pictures - I do not exaggerate — of the home of the dentist in Wroclaw who had once treated Lenin's teeth. Even so I heard. . . "Question (schoolmaster to student): 'What was the most important historical development in Answer: 'Lenin was five

The Kennan people even dug up a joke that combined Lenin and sex, and that takes a lot of ingenuity, and a little patience. Here it is, as recited by Sovietologist Abraham Brumberg: "As its contribu-tion to the 100th anniversary of Lenin's birth, the Polish govern-

"Who is that man?" he exclaims. "Why, that's Trotsky," says a Polish party official. "And the woman?" says Brezhnev. "That's Krupskaya," the Polish of-ficial explains. "And where is Lenin?" Brezhnev demands, quite beside himself. "Oh," comes the reply, "Lenin is in Poland."

Old Favorite

Endlessly useful is the central story of what happens when you make the wrong political affilia-tion. Just before the last great purge trial, three men met in a jail cell, explaining how they had come to be arrested. The first says: "I was arrested because I was against Bukharin." The second says: "I was arrested because I was for Bukharin." The third says: "I'm Bukha-rin." That one replayed a dozen years later in Czechoslovakia, substituting Slansky; and yet again in another dozen years, featuring Dubcek.

Why not use the Soviet capacity for humor, Dr. Brumberg asks in an article in the New Leader. "When Soviet, historians' produce a sycophantic piece of rubbish about Leonid Brezhnev, why do American experts on Russia fee compelled bravely to point out its compelled bravely to point out its errors?" Does a piece of absurd propaganda deserve earnest consideration? Must we dredge up statistics to disprove Soviet statistics. Must palpably fictitious claims invariably be dismitted and another than the constant of the constant variably be dignified with tedious scholarly rebuttals?"

I was sent a booklet by the Social Security Administration which stated that I could receive these benefits so long as I did not per-form any type of work so long as I continued to reside abroad. However.if I return to the U.S. I can work and earn up to $4,000 per year without loss of benefits. As we desire to remain abroad until our children's education is completed in another two years, this ruling condemns me to sit at home and not even accept an occa-sional consulting job without losing my benefits even though the pay would be far less than my colleagues who elected to return to the United States.

DEAUVILLE, France, Sept. 7 son's "F.I.S.T." a fiction feature, (iHT) — The all-American which dramatizes the rise of the film week at Deauville, now in American labor movement from its progress, is the only foreign festival devoted exclusively to the U.S. cinema. Established four years ago, it is under the patronage of Deauville's mayor, Anne d'Ornano, and under the supervision of its cofounders, Andre Hamili and Lionel

Its present session is graced by two legendary guests from Holly-wood: Gloria Swanson and director King Vidor. Both these eminent screen figures made their debuts in the movies over 50 years ago, a fact their appearances belie, and both are still active in the art. Miss Swanson, who has been acting on Broadway and on television lately. is to star in a new film this winter and Vidor, having completed a book on film direction, is preparing another script. On Monday evening Mrs. d'Ornano bestowed the medal of Deauville upon them and simi-larly honored two other American cinema guests, Kirk Douglas and Norman Jewison.

I wenty years later, Cuba produces about 130 films a year - features, documentaries, newsreels and cartoons — the work of 10 feature-film directors and about 20 documentary directors. In addition, ICAIC is responsible for more than 100 cine-movile units, which use trucks, and sometimes even boats and mules, to bring movies to the people in remote areas.

Union, Lenin also stressed the importance of film, especially newsreels, when he told the commissar of education that "for us, cinema is the most important of all the arts." And like the first revolutionary works of Sergei Eisenstein and Dziga Vertov, Cuban movies are rich in technical finesse, inventive, concrete, and nothing like the Hollywood product they do, in fact, often admire.

Social Goals

Although not dogmatic. Cuban films do put social goals in the fore-ground. Examples include Corta-zar's "The Teacher." a prize winner at the Berlin Festival, which deals with the 1961 literacy campaign, or Sara Gomez' "One Way or Another," about the struggle of a poor neighborhood to transform itself. the Cinematographic Arts

the Cinematographic Arts

the Cinematographic Arts are deliberately excluded as a harmful legacy of capitalism, a kind of "cultural colonialism." Moreover, there are no stars in Cuban films, just ordinary people with whom audiences can identify. As one director pointed out, "When people are made to want to be pretty, ugly people feel bad."

Nonetheless, Hollywood movies remain very popular in Cuba, in spite of the U.S. blockade that forbids trade between the two counnd mules, to bring movies to the cople in remote areas.

In the early days of the Soviet into the carly days were both to speak in Havana on the same day, everyone would go hear Brezhnev: but if the choice were between a Russian and an American movie, everyone would choose the American one.

A popular weekly television show, "24 Times a Second," takes films apart to show, as Guevara has said, "all the tricks that the cinema uses, especially the commercial cinema, to strike at the sensitivity of the speciator." For instance, when "Jaws" opened in Havana, the program devoted three sessions to it. One showed how the mechanical shark worked, one gave an interview with a marine biologist who explained real shark behavior and one presented videotaped interviews with members of the "Jaws" schedule of film showings in Granma, the dialy newspaper of the Cuban Communist Party, and during the week that the delegation was there Roman Polanski's "China-town," Alfred Hitchcock's "Vertigo," John Ford's "The Sun Shines Bright" and Tomas Gutterrez Alea's Chicago Festival prize-winner. "The Last Supper," were among the films on exhibition, along with "Jaws" and "The Godfather." Not all Hollywood movies reached Cuba illegally. Francis Ford Coppola brought in his own print of "Godfather II" (commended by one Cuban director for its careful reconstruction of the revolution), and some U.S. films are bought from European distributors at inflated prices.

The Analyses

When "The Godfather" ("El Padrino") appeared, it too was analyzed on television and exhibited at 12 theaters at once so that there would not be long lines advertising the film. Before it opened, there was also a detailed article in Granma giving historical background about the Mafia (without mentioning the film).

If all this makes going to the movies in Cuba sound like going to school, that's partly true. Cuban directors feel that movies are one of the most effective ways of reaching and educating people. But they work to find engaging ways of presenting information, and the old cliches of socialist realism have been tossed out the window.

Sleep Patterns Are Called Hereditary

By Deborah Ward

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7 (IHT) - If you are an insomniac or a somnolent individual, don't fight the habit, urges Dr. Wilse Webb, a University of Florida sleep researcher. Dr. Webb says that the reason some people need 12 hours of sleep while others need only 5 is due to the fact that sleep patterns

Dr. Webb has been conducting sleep experiments for 18 years in an attempt to determine how much sleep an individual needs and the effects of disrupted slumber.

Recent results of his experiments determined by a natural biological rhythm which is inherited from one's ancestors. Since this built-in natural sleep system is difficult to change, Dr. Webb explains, "an individual reality should be should dividual really shouldn't fight the urge to sleep longer. We can't will ourselves to sleep less, for example, any more than we can will ourselves to grow a third leg."

Even though sleep patterns tend to remain constant from generation to generation. Dr. Webb reports that Americans today, on the average, sleep one and a half hours less daily than they did 60 years ago.

For most adults nowadays, the and research show that sleep is average amount of sleep is seven

The Garlic Cure for Cholesterol BONN, Sept. 7 (UPI) - West their cholesterol level dropped

German researchers have a new so-markedly. lution to the problem of cholesterol-clogged blood vessels — garlic.

Old wives have for centuries claimed that garlic cures many ills. from snake bites to toothache. Now, according to Prof. Hans Reuter of Cologne, there is proof that garlic helps clear the fat accumulating in the blood vessels of those who love to eat rich food, thereby reducing the danger of heart attacks. Tests showed that volunteers fed butter containing 50 grams of garlic oil in gelatine capsules had a cholesterol level considerably lower than that of a control group fed butter without garlic. In another experiment, patients ate 3 grams of raw garlic daily. After four weeks not only drives out the unwanted fats in the blood, but also kills bacteria such as those causing diptheria and tuberculosis. He said garlic was in some cases more effective than penicillin and other conventional antibiotics.

According to Prof. Reuter, garlic

"If everybody were to eat garlic regularly, as in many southern countries," Prof. Reuter said, "the smell would bother no one.

To get the full benefit of this herbal cure, he said, fresh garlic must be used. Garlic powder will not affect breathing work any medicinal miracles, since Dr. Webb's rese the plant loses its healing properties when processed.

"squeezing sleep" and trying to break hereditary habits, Dr. Webb notes that at least we haven't reached the level of the elephant or short-tailed shrew, which get by on only two hours of sleep. Gorillas and cats, on the other hand, sleep about 14 out of every 24 hours.

Dr. Webb says different patterns of sleep are caused by "an evolu-tionary, adaptive relationship between the organism and its environment, i.e., people and certain ani-mals sleep when and as long as they do because at some point in their development that schedule meant the difference between life and death." If an individual can get by on five hours of sleep, Dr. Webb reasons that it probably means his ancestors were forced to get by on

The change in the sleep average indicates not so much a change of habits by ancestors but a change in modern society. Dr. Webb describes this change as the "Edison effect," whereby "the electric light, while ripping away our cocoon of darkness, has expanded our activities by turning night into day and nibbling away at our slumber

Minimal Change However, over the past 100 years, the change has been minimal and most Americans still tend to need between six and a half and eight and a half hours of sleep,

In addition to the younger individual's sleeping patterns, Dr. Webb has also been studying the sleeping habits of those over 50. Volunteers for this research were isolated for 16 days while researchers measured and monitored their responses to changes in their sleep schedules. Some preliminary findjugs show that the elderly have a more fragile sleep system that is less capable of coping with changes. Dr. Webb also discovered that heart disease, strokes, cancer And, apart from the smell garlic and suicide increases among the

Other conditions that adversely affect the older individual's sleep are the influence of drugs, which "unquestionably depress respiraand frequent arousals from and disruptions of sleep, which also

If you already drive a 6 cylinder or you'd like to have one, it is more than likely that you set great store on the comfort of your car. BMW are offering you just this in an increased range of models. The BMW 520, with its new 6 cylinder engine, proves just how fascinating and advanced, technology can be in the 2 litre class.

Even with 6 cylinder engines there is still that subtle difference between quantity and quality. You can, of course, buy 6 cylinder models in the better versions of standard cars, but if you are the kind of person who is more concerned with the type of cylinder rather than the number, we recommend a test drive in one of our 520's.

All the advantages of a top class car teamed with the economy of 2 litres. The BMW 6 cylinder combines the extraordinary reliability, stability and long life of the large 6 cylinder with, performance, elasticity and economy. One important point to note is that, compared to the 4 cylinder models the present BMW 2 litre fuel consumption is, on average, less. We have also designed the 6 cylinder for more prolonged usage - it has been specially constructed to minimise wear. This, of course, means that it will be in a better condition and worth more when you want to sell it.

6 cylinder engines with lower capacity: Only the best is good enough. Not every engine with more than 4 cylinders can attain the same high standard of comfort and vibration free ride as the BMW 6 cylinder. For in the 6 cylinder engine that BMW use, the inertia forces and moments of the first and second order are completely balanced this enhances the smooth running of the car. Neither the V6 engines nor the 5 cylinder engines have this advantage.

BMW are only satisfied with the very best they can get.

China Posts Surplus In First-Half Trade

HONG KONG, Sept. 7 (AP-DI) statistics available from China's — Peking, disclosing trade statistics trading partners, estimate exports for the first time, reported that in the six months at $4.9 billion first-half exports grew 29 percent and imports 60 percent from the 1977 period. But monetary figures

Western analysts put the total trade in the first half at more than $9.5 billion, registering a $250-million trade surolus.

The report, from the official Hsinhua news agency, said China posted "a small trade surplus." It added that industrial exports continued to rise as a percentage of overall trade, with considerable increases in exports of crude oil, coal and cotton fabrics.

Among imports, Hsinhua said, technology and whole plants rose 70 percent and electrical equipment, machinery, meters and in-struments 41 percent. Import gains also were recorded for raw materials, farm machinery, chemical ferti-lizer and insecticides.

Italy Reaffirms Its Intentions To Join EMS

ROME, Sept. 7 (AP-DI) — Italian Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti reaffirmed his country's intentions to join the proposed European Monetary Sys-tem in talks today with Com-mon Market president Roy

At the same time, Mr. Andreotti emphasized that the EMS cannot be allowed to exacerbate the economic weaknesses of "less-favored countries" such as Italy.

A pegging of the lira to other European currencies within the EMS could hart the competitivi-ty of Italian exports because the Italian currency would not be able to decline in value rapidly enough to compensate for the nation's comparatively high inflation rate.

It is not known, for example, whether the Chinese use the renminbi (yuan), their currency, or the U.S. dollar in calculating the value of their trade, or what exchange rates they employ.

According to the analysts, oil ex-ports increased between 10 and 12 percent in value from the first half of 1977, while exports of light manufactures, particularly cotton textiles and clothing, probably increased more than any other category. Agriculture's share of total exports may have declined slightly,

Wider Trade Accords

Hsinhua said China signed more trade agreements and contracts with foreign concerns in the first half than in the corresponding 1977 period, noting that China signed a long-term trade agreement with Japan and another with the European Community.

The sharp appreciation of the Japanese yea — Japan is China's major trading partner — coupled with the depreciation of the dollar, tends to drive up the coller value of China's trade. Hence, saletyes say, Chinese imports could amount to more than $10 billion for the year.

China Oil-Deal Report 'Premature'

U.S. sources close to U.S.-China talks on offshore oil-exploration concessions labeled reports of an agreement between the country and a U.S. oil concern as premature (IHT, Sept.7). "I would be very much surprised" if such agreements have been concluded Stepley Young agreements that of the Titolegistees agreements agreement to the Titolegistees. cluded, Stanley Young vice president of the Washington-based National Council for U.S. China Trade, said. The U.S. firms that have been there are still doing their homework," he says. Several U.S. oil companies have sent high-level delegations to China in recent weeks to discuss offshore oil exploration. It was learned that yet another U.S. oil company, the sixth involved, Standard Oil of Indiana, also had a delegation in China recently. Indiana Standard confurns that John Swearingen, chairman, was in Peking in early July and "did discuss possible offshore oil exploration." Pennzoil, Exxon, Union Oil of California have already sent delegations to Peking Phillips Petroleum has its delegation there at the moment, and Mobil will be sending a delegation this antumn. None of the companies would confirm that it had gone beyond the preliminary stage in discussions with the Chinese regarding offshore oil exploration. Sources suggested that the Japanese report from China may have misinterpreted Chinese Deputy Premier Teng Hsiao-ping's references to the pre-liminary talks held by the Chinese and these U.S. oil

U.S. Car Sales a Record in August

With deliveries of both domestic and imported models at record levels, U.S. car sales in August rose 2.9 percent from a year earlier. Import sales were particularly strong after several months of declining sales caused largely by recent steep price boosts. A survey of leading importers showed they sold about 206,000 units, 1.2 percent above the previous record 203,500 sold in August, 1977. U.S.-built car sales totaled 750,960 units, up 3.4 percent from 726,422.

Total sales were about 956,960, a 2.9 percent increase from the previous record 929,922 in August last year. Foreign-car sales accounted for 21.5 per-cent of the market, well above the levels of recent months, but below the year-earlier 21.9-percent share. Domestic sales were paced by record deliveries of General Motors cars, which rose 14.3 percent in August, Ford's sales fell about 2.2 percent, while Chrysler posted a 12-percent drop.

U.K. Cars Sales Also a Record

August car sales in Britain rose to a record monthly high of 249,486, but imports took a record 53.8 percent of the market compared with 50.8 percent a year earlier, the previous record. The Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders say the August new-car registrations were up 24.6 percent from 200.310 a year earlier and up 6.5 percent from the previous record of 234,327 in August 1973. In the first eight months of this year, new sales of 1,181,623 were 23 percent above year-earlier levels. So far this year imports have taken 48.4 percent of all sales compared with 44.5 percent in the first eight months of 1977. BL Ltd., formerly British Leyland, was the top seller with 57,633 new car registrations for a 23.1-percent market share. Ford Motor, of British, sold 56,673 cars for a 22.7-percent market share. Vauxhall Motors, the British GM subsidiary, 16,781 or 6.8 percent and Chrysler U.K., 15,419 or 6.2 percent. Sales of Japanese cars totaled 31,220 for a 12.5-percent share, compared with year-earlier sales of 28,464 for a 14.2-percent market share, with eight-month sales rising to 131,793, or 11.1 percent of the market, from 100,022, or 10.4 percent, a year earlier.

U.S. Reduces Dollar Purchases

NEW YORK, Sept. 7 (NYT) -The amount of Federal Reserve and Treasury intervention in the foreign exchange market in New York decreased to $332.5 million in the quarter ended July 31 from the $1.26 billion that monetary authorities used on behalf of the dollar in the preceding quarter, the Fed

By Colleen Sullivan

The intervention involved the sale of the equivalent of $300.3 million in Deutsche marks and $32 million in Swiss francs.

Fed officials, terming the U.S. dollar "seriously undervalued" and its current level on world money markets "ridiculously low," said yesterday that the Fed would have to continue to intervene in foreignexchange markets on behalf of the dollar until the Carter administration took stronger measures to resolve the nation's underlying economic problems.

The two ranking foreign-ex-change officials of the Federal Re-serve Bank of New York, which conducts the central bank's currency operations, said the dollar would not return to acceptable levels until a federal energy program was adopted — if not by Congress, then by executive fiat — and until the country's massive trade deficit was reduced.

Alan Holmes, executive vice president and manager of the Fed's open-market account, and Scott Pardee, vice president and deputy manager of foreign operations, made the comments at the bank's quarterly news conference yesterday on foreign-exchange opera-

As the dollar stabilized on world money markets, compared with its performance in the February-April quarter, the Fed and Treasury Department also repaid $1.77 billion of "swap" debt outstanding with West German central bank and $69 million of swap debt outstanding with the Swiss National Bank, the Fed said.

The swap network operated by the world's central banks and the Bank for International Settlements consists of a $22.2-billion series of short-term, reciprocal credit lines to finance foreign-exchange inter-outstanding with the Bundesbank at the end of July was $847.5 mil-lion — $650.5 million owed by the Fed and $197 million by Treasury. While the $69-million Swiss swap debt incurred during the February-April quarter was repaid entirely in May and June, the Fed drew another $22.9 million from that credit line during the May-July period to finance part of its market intervention, the bank said. All of the $22.9 million was outstanding at the end of the quarter. Neither the Fed nor the Treasury drew upon their swap lines with the Bundesbank during the last quarter.

The balance of the swap debt

Mr. Holmes said the repayments had been made to "clear the lines" of short-term credit that the central bank may call on in an "emergency." Neither he nor Mr. Pardee would discuss the sharp currency fluctuations in the past five weeks that have pushed the dollar to new lows against the Japanese yen and Deutsche mark. They also declined to define an "emergency" market situation or to discuss whether the government had used the swap credit since the end of the last reporting period on July 31.

The repayments to the Bundesbank resulted in a net loss for the Fed's foreign-exchange operations of $14.7 million. The Treasury, record $31 billion in the preceding

During the May-July period the two agencies also repaid $247.2 million in debt to the Swiss National Bank that was incurred prior to the suspension of the gold standard in August 1971. The Fed repaid $103 million, reducing its indebted-ness from that era to $278.8 million. The Treasury's Exchange Stabilization Fund repaid an equiva-lent of $144.2 million of pre-August 1971 Swiss franc-denominated securities, leaving an $850.4 million These repayments resulted in losses of $63.3 million for the Fed and $88.6 million for the Treasury for the latest quarter, the bank said. Mr. Holmes said the trading ac-

In Trade Talks WASHINGTON, Sept.7 (WP) — U.S. Japanese trade talks ended today with no resolution reported on the issue of reduced tariffs on a wide range of agricultural products. U.S. officials yesterday called the discussions "disappointing."

Follow-up meetings are slated to be held either here or in Japan on the touchiest questions of quotas on Japanese imports of U.S. beef and citrus products. Further talks on other agricultural items are ex-pected to take place in Geneva.

The discussions on agricultural products are being conducted by the Office of Special Trade Representative Robert Strauss, with a Japanese delegation led by Japanese Special trade envoy Nobuhiko Ushiba and Japanese Agriculture Minister Ichiro Nakagawa The two sides discussed U.S. demands for lower tariffs on pork. chicken, poultry, wine, raisins, olives, and other products. Late yesterday afternoon and evening discussions turned to beef and orange quotas, which now are respectively, 90,000 tons and 45,000 tons annually. The U.S. position is that the quotas should be abandoned entirely, but U.S. officials do not expect that to happen. A lesser goal set by Mr. Strauss is a doubling of the quotes, but the Jap-anese delegation is strongly resisting that proposal.

LOST TRIBES AND PROMISED LANDS

The Origins of American Racism

By Ronald Sanders. Little Brown. 443 pp. $15. Reviewed by Bernard Weisberger

YN HIS PREFACE to this book. lish planters in a European trans-Ronald Sanders describes it as a multiple ethnic history of the interrelationships among blacks, Indians, Jews and white Christian dominators" in the New World, which draws on a "perhaps star-tling variety of subject matters." The variety is such, in fact, that he sometimes seems to be merely spinning out a series of fascinating but unrelated tales. He promises, however, that the "various strands keep coming together in the end." They do not quite do that, and what emerges is therefore a sometimes puzzling design — but one that is, all the same unfailingly interesting and profoundly important. It extends into new areas the crucial dissections of American racial stereotypes undertaken in recent years by writers like Winthrop Jordan, David Brion Davis, George Fredrick-son and Robert Berkholer.

It is essential to try, at least, to summarize Sanders wide-ranging story. For almost a century before 1492, he believes, the European imagination painted a favorable pioture of lands beyond the horizon. In those unknown realms were mythical kingdoms, innocent "savages." lost Edens, fabled treasuries — a rich black Christian king (Prester John) in Africa; a Jewish nation descended from Israel's ten lost tribes somewhere in Asia; and Fortunate Islands in the Atlantic, whose inhabitants lived in utopian social harmony or in a reworking of antiquity's old age (both Renaissance conceptions).

All these legends fed the curiosi-ty which underlay the great age of exploration. They also set up as-sumptions that the people to be met with in the newly discovered lands would be treated as human beings in familiar social roles and configurations regardless of color. That was why so many early dis-coverers looked at the red and black tribesmen, and thought they saw beneath the paint and bangles counterparts to their own princes, nobles, councilors, priests, traders, peasants and workers. But other, countervailing forces were at work, growing stronger as the 16th century unfolded. In Spain, only recently recaptured for Christianity, the work of uprooting the tolerant, eight-century-old Moorish culture led to a zeal for doctrinal and "blood" purity that became translated into forced conversion and expulsion of Jews and Moslems, and far less sympathy for newly found dark-skinned infidels. Portuguese explorers opened the African coast, and in the expansive mood of early commercial capitalism, found nothing wrong in bartering with the Arab traders and tribal rulers of "Guinea" for cargoes of slaves. They then sold these possible kinemen of Destar John to possible kinsmen of Prester John to Dutch, French, Spanish and Eng-action unmarked by qualms. In all of Western Europe both Reformation and Counter-Reformation sharpened religious enthusiasm for heresy-hunting at home and for killing dispossessing and converting heathers abroad Even the romantic individualism of a waning chivalric order encouraged some young Hispanic gentlemen-soldiers to dream of subduing faraway empires and redeeming whole peoples for God. The conquista-dores were the last exemplars of the illusions that Cervantes would And so, by around 1650, it was done. The Indians became backward, impoverished wards for the Spanish friars, and perfidious Canaanites for Puritan English-men. The Africans became benight ed subhumans - slaves not by misfortune, as was the case in ancient times, but through natural inferiori-ty. Some European humanists might criticize the prevailing drift, but the debate was nonetheless carried on in terms imposed by Euro-pean mastery. Noble or skulking cannibalistic or childlike, the red man and the black man were images conceived by and for whites. The best example is the term "Indian" itself — Columbus' error in thinking he had hit the Indies was perpetuated for all native Americans.

Such, brutally compressed is

Sanders' argument, drawn from an intensive examination of maps, atlases, plays, novellas, travel books and religious tracts, all embodying various cultural visions. I must admit to ignorance of many of them, and take it on faith that they say what Sanders asserts. Given that assumption, the book is engaging, stimulating and original. Some of it, however, seems a bit strained. Sanders has written considerably on Jewish history, and he believes that the Jewish search for asylum was an important compo-nent in the urge to explore. He cites a long list of forcibly converted Jews (and some who were not Christianized), who played important roles in mapping and publica-ing the New World, and financing expeditions. He plays with the longstanding speculation that Co-lumbus himself was of converse descent. In my eyes, at least, he builds too many conjectures that rest on assumptions supported by possibilities. Likewise, some of his illustrative stories, however sensitively interpreted, impede rather than expedite his argument. The tale of Estevanithe shipwrecked black slave who became a venerated healer among the Indians, and the ac-count of Squanto, the Indian interpreter and middleman for the settlers of Plymouth, are examples Both mean to show that evidence of the humanity of black and red men lay under the Europeans eyes if they cared to look. But both could have been dealt with more econom-Sanders' work sounds an optimistic note in a world where the color line is still at the center of history. What he says is that racism is not bred in the bone, but flourishes in some cultural temperatures and not in others. The implication is that it can be changed with circumstances. It is a consummation devoutly to be wished and one on which the hope of domestic and international peace for the next generation may ultimately rest.

the difference in evaluation that players may assign to the same cards. Both North-South pairs play identical ranges for one-no-trump opening bids, "a good 15 to a bad 18 points."

At the first table, South chose to treat his hand as a "bad" 18, de-valuing his doubleton heart queen. He therefore opened one no-trump and everyone passed. After a spade lead and spade continuation when the ace of diamonds was knocked out, he had nine tricks after the queen of clubs fell and a 10th when West discarded a club.

In the replay, South took a rosier view of his cards, one in which most experts would concur. He decided that the holding of honors in every suit, honors in combination in three suits, and high intermedi-ate spot-cards qualified his hand as a "good" 18. He therefore bid more aggressively, opening one club and jumping to two no-trump over North's one-heart response. North. of course, carried on to game.

West chose a short-suit lead from his nearly hopeless hand, the ten of diamonds. Since his partnership plays that the lead of the ten shows zero or two higher honors in that suit, the appearance of dummy's king made the diamond situation clear to East. He knew that any defensive prospects must lie elsewhere.

South put up the king of dia-monds, encouring East to win the trick while he had the least possible information about the deal. East did win the diamond ace, and he paused to consider the hand. Part-

The diagrammed deal illustrates ner was marked with one high card at most, and it seemed likely that East-West's only potential source of tricks was in the heart suit.

Since the only way in which the defenders could take four fast heart tricks was for declarer to hold the doubleton queen and partner ac-third. East acted on that premise. He plunked down the king of hearts, led the heart six to West's ace, and his J-9 of hearts were a tenace - and the setting trick over dummy's ten. Note that hearts had to be played in exactly this sequence to defeat three no-trumps. Had East started with a low heart, dummy's ten would have become a fourthround stopper. On the lead of the jack, declarer could promote the ten by covering with the queen.

McEnroe, Gerulaitis Win in U.S. Tennis

Evert, Navratilova Advance

By Barry Lorge

NEW YORK, Sept. 7 (WP) — Johan Kriek and Butch Walts, the great pretenders in the quarterfinals of the U.S. Open tennis championships, were eliminated yesterday by local lads who suddenly appear to be great contenders; Vitas Gerulaitis and John McEnroe.

Gerulaitis, 24, the No.-4 seed who grew up in Brooklyn and Queens and now lives in Kings Point, N.Y., twisted an ankle in the first set last night but showed no ill effects as he routed Kriek, 6-2, 6-1.

6-2, in just 86 minutes. McEnroe. 19, the No- 15 seed from Douglaston, N.Y., became the first teen-ager since Ken Rosewall in the mid-1950s to have reached the semifinals of both the Wimbledon and U.S. championships when he dismanuled Walts, 6-1, 6-2, 7-6, in the afternoon session,

Crowd Sets Record

Last night's crowd of 15,794 at the Louis Armstrong Stadium of the new National Tennis Center was a record for the four years of evening play in the tournament. Combined with the matinee crowd of 14,786, it set a new one-day total attendanc record of 30,580.

Gerulaitis, who next plays the winner of today's quarterfinal between Bjorn Borg and Raul Ramirez, lost his serve only once, to trail, 1-2, in the first set.

With Kriek serving at 15-30 in the next game, Gerulaitis' right an-kle gave out as he chased a faulted serve. He fell on the court, clutching it, and looked as if he might be finished. Line umpires and ball-boys crowded around him, and Kriek - a 20-year-old South African playing in only his second ma-jor tournament — hopped over the net to see how he was.

Gerulaitis got up, walked ginger-ly for a few seconds, stretched and lexed the ankle, but showed no further difficulty. A player who re-lies on speed afoot and quickness and agility at the net, he looked as numble as ever.

Slide Begins

Kreik double-faulted to 15-40, saved two break points, then shots to lose his serve. That was the start of an eightgame slide, during which he lost 13 straight points. He got in only 27 of 71 first serves (a dismal 36 percent) and double-faulted 16 times. He also committed flocks of unforced errors -24 on the forehand, 17 on the backhand, Kriek came through a section of the draw weakened by the defeats of No.-8 seed Sandy Mayer and No.-5 Eddie Dibbs, beating Jai DiLouie, Rick Fagel, Rejean Genois and Brian Teacher, Last night, his "dream draw" turned into a nightmare.

McEnroe, who last year qualified for Wimbledon and went on to become the youngest semifinalist in the history of the oldest tennis championship, played exceptional-ly well to beat Walts, who was still stiff-legged and a couple of steps slow after his five-set victory over defending champion Guillermo Vi-las Monday night. That match consumed 4 hours, 11 minutes, on the physically demanding, cement-like

In the semifinals, McEnroe plays the winner of today's match between Jimmy Connors and Brian Gott/ried.

Evert Eliminates Austin

In women's action, Chris Evert, 23, scored a quarterfinal victory yesterday over 15-year-old Tracy Austin.

They have played three times in the last 15 months, and each time Austin has grown a little bigger, a little stronger, a little more formi-dable. She was 5 feet tall and weighed 90 pounds when they first met in the second round at Wimbledon last year. She is 5-3 and 110 behind Martina Navratilova, who also advanced to the semirinals yesterday with an impressive 6-3, 6-2 victory over Virginia Ruzici.

At Wimbledon, on grass, Evert won. 6-1. 6-1.

"I think I'm playing better with each match," said Evert, who considered Austin an ideal quarterfinal opponent.

"This was a pressure match for me because Tracy is a tough competitor. Her mental attitude is so much better than most, and that's what posed a threat to me," said Evert who admitted she has not watched Austin in the past four months but had read that she is growing stronger, hitting harder and playing more aggressively.

Evert now is preparing to meet her contemporary, Navratilova, 21, who served-and-volleyed ferociously to overwhelm Ruzici.

Reutemann to Join Lotus

LONDON, Sept. 7 (UPI) - The Lotus team announced today that Carlos Reutemann will join Mario Andretti on its Grand Prix Formula 1 team next year.

Reutemann will be the unofficial No. 2 to Andretti, who is on the verge of chinching his first world championship. The Argentinian will replace Sweden's Ronnie Peterson, who is moving to McLaren. The Lotus team has routed the opposition this season, winning eight races and finishing 1-2 in four. Peterson is the only driver in a position to beat Andretti for the world championship in the remaining three races, but he has been given strict instructions to let Andretti win and reportedly s unhappy about playing second fiddle. He deliberately refrained from overtaking Andretti when he could have done so at the Dutch Grand Prix :wo weeks ago. Reutemann has had an unhappy season at Ferrari, criticizing the selec-tion of tires which he says has let the team down. His most recent victory was at the British Grand Prix in July but he has only cracked the top six in four of this season's 13 races to date. Ferrari sources said that Reutemann decided to move when Enzo Fer-

He stared straight ahead through thin, scholarly eyeglasses and said: "I thought they were injured. I also thought that they could make a race of it if their pitchers got healthy. And I thought that no team, not even the Red Sox, could play .700 ball forever."

meroa has won seven of nine. Catfish Hunter was in drydock with a 32-year-old shoulder that wouldn't pitch. Then he won six straight last month, and medical science wondered. Meanwhile, Guidry was winning 20 of 22 decisions, and he hasn't lost since the Orioles edged him a month ago. 2-1.

They were still minus Andy Messersmith and Don Gullett, two of the most expensive pitchers bought during Yankee owner George Steinbrenner's frequent shopping sorees. But when the three top starters needed help, Lemon called to the bullpen for Sparky Lyle or Rich Gossage. Both responded, and Gossage recently saved four games and won another during five consecutive appearances.

They even survived that horren-dous weekend in Baltimore when four games were disrupted by acts of God, who showed no favoritism. The first and third games were cut short by rain; the second and fourth were delayed by electrical wanted to be consistent, so they did failure. Both teams naturally blamed the umpires.

Howls of Protest The Orioles howled to high heav-

The United States finished second with a 9-1 record and the only U.S. loss was 5-3 to Cuba.

Egyptians Put U.S. Drink On Most-Wanted List

By Thomas W. Lippman

AIRO, Sept. 7 (WP) — Extra million bottles, and sales manager men were assigned to ride the delivery trucks after reported at-tempts to carry off the precious cargo. Merchants who obtained it legitimately sold it as fast as they could display it. Americans with ties to the company got midnight telephone calls from Cabinet ministers asking for special supplies.

the prizes? Bottles of 7-Up, suddealy the hottest commodity in

This country's insatiable thirst for soft drinks, attributable to hot dusty weather, the national sweet tooth and the Moslem ban on alcohol have made 7-Up the most popular American product to be marketed here since diplomatic relations between Egypt and the United States were restored in 1974.

Until June, 7-Up was an unattainable luxury for most Egyptians because it was imported from bottling plants abroad and sold at tourist hotels and restaurants for a

Then local production began, at an automated plant on the outskirts of the city that turns out 7-Up and Canada Dry's Sport Cola. With the sale price on the street cut to the equivalent of 7 cents a bottle, demand exceeded production almost overnight.

"Anything sweet to eat or drink is the best business of all in Egypt," said sales manager Shams Tayeb. His job is not so much to promote sales, he said, as to make sure that all the distributors get their fair share of the limited supply — a task that required the trucks to break out of circles of would-be clients who were trying to carry the drinks away by the case to meet their customers' demand.

The bottling plant is owned by on the blacklist of the Arab boycott Cairo Beverages and Industrial Co., of Israel. # Happy Birthday, Caligula and Others

PARIS (IHT) — Americans in Europe probably don't see the television shows that are so popular at home, among which the most popular are the annual awards doled out to honorably chosen personalities in show business, including special awards to personalities who somehow were ignored in their day, such as the late Charlie Chaplin, who received the televised acclaim of a jam-packed Hollywood theater with amazing grace, as the saying is, a mere two years before he died: Either he broke down and literally sobbed his profound gratitude or he performed doing so. After studying the rerun of this event at the time of his death half a dozen times I was still unable to believe positively that he was not performing.

Ordinarily, the awards are not much more than the sensible promotion of extra busi-ness with added income to a personality, and a movie. Then came honors for people in television, and this was pretty much the half-brother or half-sister of the same business on behalf of movies. Then, came singers and records, rock, country and Western, Blue Grass, and so on. Then came — well, what did come? Well, rivals of the three foregoing, they came, and did just as well at the box office, so to put it, as the originals.

Also, a regular weekly show of one-hour duration in which somebody was "roasted" while the camera fell on the faces of the roasters just as they were open-mouthed with glee about something one of them had said about the honored victim, who demonstrated his good sportsmanship by taking it all sweetly — until it was a torrent of smiling invective upon his no longer gleeful fiendish friends, and elegant enemies. Nobody appeared to be doing anything planned and rehearsed, but nobody was doing anything else, and the camera falling upon the face of Orson Welles haw-hawing, or Milton Berle smirking, or Joan Rivers appealing to the audience with a gesture of helplessness, the camera compelled even a child to suspect fraudulence all the way down the line.

No Mirth

There was no mirth in anybody's laughter, at all. It was rehearsed, and that is one thing that rehearsal instantly transforms into a bare-faced lie. And sometimes this lying was done by a candidate for president such as Richard Nixon, who also once appeared on "Laugh-In" and repeated the double-entendre and dull chant of "sock it to me," and it seems I also once saw the television star from the Roman Catholic Church whose name escapes me at the moment: a lean-faced man who liked to presume a worldliness that in no wise canceled out his essential purpose of passing along benedictions to whoever might glance in his direction.

Anybody in show business or church business who was somehow bypassed by the regular shows usually appeared in a special show which was apily identified as a Special, and one of those that was notable for its all-round inappropriateness was a living memorial to Edward J. Robinson contrived by a dear friend, the bushy-haired actor who played for so many years Dr. Somebody in a very popular television series. It is not senility alone that is preventing me from remembering the names of everybody I am thinking about, it is a kind of instinctive defense against being further annoyed by these insatiably childish and pathetic people, for they are the national bores, and we must not cheat by leaving some of their names totally concealed: The biggest may very well be

Phony Legend

Another enormity in the phony legend of heroics is the man who walks sideways as he tries to move forward, apparently the consequence of a helpless imitation of the horses who helped make his legend — John Wayne. He represents quiet homely American strength — but strictly in B movies, even when manufactured by his champion, the director John Ford, who got his style not in imitation of horses but in homage to wind, which does something deeply evocative in every one of his pictures — lifts and sails a piece of newspaper off the sidewalk into the eye of the camera, with a headline saying something useful to the movie, like Horse Sold to Glue Factory. Abraham Lincoln is said to have enjoyed telling about the drunk who emerged from the tavern at two in the morning and got into the saddle only to find his horse kicking at the stirrup with his left-hind leg. This compelled the drunk to remark quite logically. Look here, horse, if you're going to get on, too, I'm going to get

No television program has ever permitted members who are not in show business to celebrate their achievements: and who might these be? Well, it might be in order to reverse the question and ask who might they not be? Locomotive engineers. Cross-country bus drivers. Captains of ships. Engineers of highways, bridges, dams. Professors. Medical doctors. Psychiatrists. Floorwalkers. Janitors. Lawyers. Accountants. Farmers. Checkout clerks at supermarkets. Dentists. Government high-rank officers. Gov-ernment low-rank officers. Tax collector audit people, of whom there must be half a million, for I myself have been put in touch with a quarter of a million of them. Gamblers. Bartenders. Headwaiters. Airline pilots, and their helpers out back among the people. And so on and so forth.

I suggest to one or another of the three networks that they look into a slight freshening of their tired honor-paying programs, and give us some straight unapologetic accounting of life among small-town revivalists, for instance—the big-timers pay for their own TV time: Billy Graham, Oral Roberts, and a half dozen others who now and then drop me a line, more or less as follows: Pardner, I was talking to God last night about you. And then goes on and invites me to send in anything from one to one million dollars so that a true University of God may be constructed in the Ozarks. What's the matter with the University of Kentucky is my reply to all such solicitations. I'm not even sure I'm not opposed to those universities, or at any rate to their instable lifelies and deally personnel both variably lifeless and deadly personnel, both

Pour or five years ago one of the biggest universities began to send me letters to find out if I would be receptive about being granted an honorary degree as a doctor of letters or some such. I replied that I was receptive to the idea of finding out how such a thing works, but that I did not want an honorary degree, for I had all of those granted in essence over the years by all of the universities of the world, for my writing itself, not one word of this in official or any other kind of writing excepting letters from other kind of writing, excepting letters from readers. And I asked the president of that university to tell me why I should accept such an honorary degree, which meant leav-ing my work to travel, being bored for about four hours of official stuff on a stage in front of an audience, and about four full days of social events. The man rather won my heart when he confessed that by doing so I would be doing him a big favor. We ought to be reminded on television and in newspapers every day that on this day 40 or 60 or 70 years ago so and so was born. Think of it. For instance, Caligula was born in 12 AD, Frederic March in 1897, Ted Williams in 1918, Eldridge Cleaver in 1935. Not to mention Goethe and Dreiser, and you know who. August 31st, for instance, 70 years ago, for instance. Let's have a little indifference about that, in passing. Happy birthday, old man, or should I say old boy?

PEOPLE: Sal A. Mander Leads Newtist Party in Colo.

Sal A. Mander picked up 7 percent of the vote in the Aspen, Colo., mayoral race in 1977, even though his name was ruled off the ballot. This year, he is a candidate for governor in Colorado. His running mate on the Newtist Party slate is G. Turkey Murphy, says Secretary of State Mary Estill Buchanan, She says their nomination petitions had 588 valid signatures — more than enough to make the ballot. Sal A. Mander was once newspaper cartoonist Christopher David Cassatt, who won a legal name change after Sal A. Mander - the name of his cartoon character - was struck from the Aspen ballot last year. Murphy may use any nickname he likes on the ballot, the secretary of state says.

When a vaudeville parrot named Gonzo was stolen in Morecambe, England, the thief was quickly nabbed. He is named Stanley Parrott. Parrott, 31, pleaded guilty to stealing the bird from an entertainment of the standard of t ment center and was fined $97. Gonzo is valued at nearly $4,000. Parrott's license number was noted by a parking-lot attendant who saw him driving off with Gonzo, now safely back with its trainer. Parrott claimed he found the bird in the parking lot and intended to return

In Ireland, a 20-year-old American beauty, Elizabeth Shovim of Pittsburgh, has won the nation's top beauty title and become the new Rose of Tralee. Miss Shovlin, a travel agent, was crowned at the Festival of Kerry. The green-eyed blonde scooped the annual title and £1,000 over 26 other young women from three continents. The winner's parents were born in County Donegal but emigrated to the United States before she was born. Of her win, she said: "I feel so selfish. I wish everyone had won.
